FOOTNOTES:

- Report only to State.
- CDC case definition.
- Includes persons being treated in hyperbaric chambers for suspect CO poisoning.
- *Applies only to licensed hospitals (as defined by CGS, Ch368V). Hospitals report central-line associated blood stream infections associated with designated intensive care units (ICUs): any pediatric ICU in the hospital (not including neonatal ICU) and the medical ICU, or, if no medical ICU, the medical-surgical ICU. Make reports to the DPH via the National Healthcare Safety Network (NHSN) using NHSN definitions, criteria, and protocols.
- Community-onset: illness in a person living in the community at the time of illness onset and no known hospitalizations in preceding 3 months; if hospitalized, a positive test taken within 48 hours of admission.

- Invasive disease: confirmed by isolation from sterile fluid (blood, CSF, pericardial, pleural, peritoneal, joint, or vitreous) bone, internal body sites, or other normally sterile sites. Includes muscle for group A streptococcus.
- "Exposure" includes infant born to known HIV-infected mother.
- Death in child or adolescent who never fully recovers from influenza and dies from a possible complication (e.g., encephalopathy, bacterial pneumonia).
- Clinical sepsis and blood or CSF isolate obtained from an infant < 7 days old.
- Individual cases of "significant unusual illness" are also reportable.
- Community-acquired: infection present on admission to hospital, and person has no previous hospitalizations or regular contact with the health-care setting.

5. Laboratories conducting HIV genotype tests should report the HIV DNA sequence file electronically. Report all positive HIV antibody

- and antigen tests, and all viral load tests (including those with no virus detectable).
6. On request from DPH and if adequate tissue is available, send fixed tissue from the specimen used to diagnose CIN2, 3 or cervical AIS or their equivalent for HPV typing according to instructions from DPH.
